65. Management and trade unions shall co-operate to ensure that effective communication and consultation take place so as to promote efficiency, understanding and the individual worker's sense of satisfaction and involvement in his job.
66. Communication and consultation are particularly important in times of change. The achievement of change is a joint concern of management and workers and shall be carried out in a way which has regard both for the efficiency of the undertaking and the interests of the workers. Major changes in working arrangements shall not be made by management without prior discussions with workers and their trade unions, if any.
67. When changes in management take place following, for example, a merger or take-over, the new managers shall make prompt contact with the trade unions concerned and take steps to explain any changes in policies affecting workers.

COMMUNICATION

68. The most important method of communication is through personal contact between each manager and his immediate work group or individual workers and between managers and workers' representatives.

Consultation between management and workers or their trade union representatives about operational and other day-to-day matters is necessary in all establishments, whatever their size. Large establishments shall have systematic arrangements for management and trade union representatives to meet regularly.
75. Management shall after consultation with the trade unions concerned set up and maintain appropriate consultative arrangements. The arrangements shall not be used to bypass or discourage trade unions.
76. Consultation and negotiation are closely related but distinct processes. Management and trade unions shall consider carefully how to link the two. It may often be advantageous for the same committee to cover both. Where there are separate bodies, systematic communication between those involved in the two processes is essential.

PART VI –WORKERS’ PARTICIPATION

77. Workers’ participation is essential to create an environment of openness and to manage workplace changes.

WORKERS’ PARTICIPATION IN DECISION-MAKING

78. Management shall establish mechanisms, such as a Joint Consultative Committee, for effective consultation with workers and their trade union representatives.

PART VII - COLLECTIVE BARGAININGGENERAL

87. Collective bargaining may take place at various levels, ranging from a group of workers within an enterprise to an industry. Negotiations for the same group of workers may be conducted at different levels about different issues.
88. Where negotiations take place at more than one level, the matters to be bargained about at each level shall be defined by agreement. The aim shall be to assign to each level the matters which can be realistically settled at that level. Whatever the level at which an agreement is reached, its terms shall be applied effectively at the place of work.

BARGAINING UNITS

89. Collective bargaining in an enterprise is conducted in relation to defined groups of workers which can appropriately be covered by one negotiating process.
90. A bargaining unit shall cover as wide a group of workers as practicable. Too many small units make it difficult to ensure that related groups of workers are treated consistently. The number of separate units can often be reduced by the formation of a joint negotiating panel representing a number of trade unions.

91. The interests of workers covered by a bargaining unit need not be identical, but there shall be a substantial degree of common interest. In deciding the pattern of bargaining arrangements, the need to take into account the distinct interests of professional or other workers who form a minority group shall be balanced against the need to avoid unduly small bargaining units.
92. Factors which shall be taken into account in establishing a bargaining unit include –
- (a) the nature of the work;
 - (b) the training, experience and professional or other qualifications of the workers concerned;
 - (c) the extent to which they have common interests;

 - (j) whether separate bargaining arrangements are needed for particular categories of workers, such as supervisors or workers who represent management in negotiations.

93. (1) Where proposals are made for establishing or varying a bargaining unit, the first aim of management and trade unions shall be to reach agreement.
- (2) Where there is no agreement, parties shall, jointly or separately, consider referring the matter to –
- (a) an employers' organisation;
 - (b) a higher level within the trade union; or
 - (c) the Commission for examination and advice.

RECOGNITION – GENERAL CONSIDERATION

94. The interests of workers are best served by strong and effective trade unions.
95. The competition among separate trade unions for the right to negotiate for the same category of workers leads to friction and weakens the trade unions.
96. Recognition agreements applying to an industry and made between federations or groups of trade unions and employers shall be concluded whenever appropriate.

CLAIMS FOR RECOGNITION

97. A claim for recognition by a trade union shall not be entertained insofar as that claim is based on discrimination of any kind including discrimination as to occupation, age, marital status, sex, sexual orientation, colour, race, religion, HIV status, national extraction, social origin, political opinion or affiliation.
98. Claims by trade unions for recognition for negotiating purposes shall, as far as possible, be settled voluntarily between the parties.

99. In the case of any claim, management is entitled to know the number, but not the identities of the workers in the proposed bargaining unit who are members of the union making the claim.
100. In general, it is in the interest of workers and of the industry that any given category of workers in an undertaking shall be represented by a single trade union.
101. The fact that conflicting claims are made by trade unions to represent a given category of workers is not in itself a justification for the employer to refuse negotiating rights to a trade union.
102. Where 2 or more trade unions seek recognition in respect of the same category of workers in an industry, those unions shall examine the possibilities of an amalgamation, or of the formation of a joint negotiating panel, or of some other appropriate variation in the trade union structure in the industry in question.
103. The responsibility to avoid disputes on recognition matters between trade unions rests principally with the trade unions themselves. Employers shall endeavour to observe a position of neutrality where rival claims are concerned, and a position of neutrality must include the honouring of all existing collective bargaining commitments.
104. The responsibility of a trade union for the failure of an existing joint negotiating panel, or for the failure of a proposed panel to gain acceptance, shall weigh heavily against any claim by that trade union for individual recognition.

105. Where there is any uncertainty as to the prospect of a joint negotiating panel acting as a single entity and behaving responsibly towards the employer, the formation of that panel may be recommended or agreed upon for a trial period, or for more than one trial period.

AFTER RECOGNITION

106. Management and recognised trade unions shall facilitate and encourage personal contact and discussions between managers and officers of the trade unions at all appropriate levels.

COLLECTIVE AGREEMENTS

107. Collective agreements deal with matters of procedures and matters of substance which are of joint concern to management and workers. A single agreement may contain provisions of both kinds or they may be dealt with in separate agreements. In either case, the agreement shall be in writing and shall contain provisions for checking that procedural provisions have not become out of date.
108. Collective agreements shall contain substantive provisions relating to terms and conditions of employment and shall indicate the duration for which they are to apply. Collective agreements shall inter alia, cover –
- (a) wages or salaries as appropriate, overtime rates, bonuses, piecework rates and other systems relating earnings to performance;
 - (b) hours of work, and, where appropriate, provisions for hours of overtime and shift work; and
 - (c) leave entitlement and pay.

109. Collective agreements may also cover such matters as –
- (a) techniques for determining levels of performance and job grading, such as work measurement and job evaluation;
 - (b) procedures for handling redundancy and temporary lay-offs; and
 - (c) the deduction by management of trade union dues from the pay of members.
110. It is advantageous for collective agreement to be made at industry level to cover as many aspects as possible relating to –
- (a) terms and conditions of employment suitable for general application;
 - (b) general guidelines for negotiating at a lower level matters which cannot be decided satisfactorily at industry level; and
 - (c) a procedure for settling disputes, either for the industry as a whole or as a model for individual undertakings to adopt by agreement.
111. To maintain fair and stable pay structures, an agreement reached at the level of the enterprise shall define –
- (a) how and within what limits any negotiations at a lower level shall be conducted; and
 - (b) how it relates to any relevant industry-wide agreement.

FOURTH SCHEDULE – *continuedBARGAINING IN GOOD FAITH

112. Where a trade union or a group of trade unions has been recognised as a bargaining agent, the trade union or the group of trade unions and the employer shall bargain in good faith.
113. Bargaining in good faith requires the trade union or the group of trade unions and the employer to –
- (a) meet and discuss meaningfully –
 - (i) a collective agreement or any variation of a collective agreement, including matters relating to the initiation of the bargaining or for the renewal of a collective agreement;
 - (ii) any matter arising out of or in relation to a collective agreement while the agreement is in force; and
 - (iii) any proposal by an employer that may affect the workers' terms and conditions of employment, including a proposal to contract out work otherwise done by the workers or to sell or transfer all or part of the employer's business;
 - (b) do their best to enter into a procedure agreement as soon as possible;
 - (c) do their best to find mutually acceptable solutions and to enter into an agreement, as soon as possible;
 - (d) recognise the role and the authority of any person chosen by each party to be its representative or advocate;

- (e) negotiate in a reasonable, fair and honest manner;
 - (f) refrain from doing any act that is likely to undermine the bargaining process or the authority of the other party;
 - (g) provide the other party information that is reasonably necessary to support or substantiate their respective position;
 - (h) respond and give consideration to proposals made by the other party;
 - (i) consider the proposals of the other party within a reasonable period and, where the proposal is not accepted, offer an explanation for the non-acceptance;
 - (j) identify the barriers to agreement and give further consideration to their respective position in the light of any alternative options put forward;
 - (k) conclude a collective agreement, unless there is a valid reason not to do so; and
 - (l) sign the collective agreement.
114. Bargaining in good faith does not require a trade union or a group of trade unions and an employer bargaining for a collective agreement to –
- (a) agree on all matters to be included in a collective agreement; and
 - (b) enter into a collective agreement.

115. Notwithstanding paragraph 114, bargaining in good faith implies that the parties shall continue to bargain on other issues even if they have come to a dead-lock on any issue and to conclude an agreement, unless there is a reasonable ground not to do so.
116. Bargaining in good faith does not prevent the parties from expressing their respective opinions.
117. Collective bargaining shall be deemed to be in bad faith where a trade union or an employer without entering into discussion –
- (a) rejects a claim without any valid reason or explanation;
 - (b) uses delaying tactics;
 - (c) adopts a take-it or leave-it attitude; or
 - (d) threatens and uses intimidating language with a view to endangering the harmonious industrial relations at the workplace.
118. Where a party has reasonable grounds to believe that there has been a breach of good faith during the negotiations, the party shall, wherever practicable, raise the matter at an early stage to enable the other party to remedy the situation.

PART VIII – WORKER REPRESENTATION AT THE PLACE OF WORK

119. Workers need representatives to put forward their collective views to management and to safeguard their interests. It is also easier for management to deal with representatives who can speak for their fellow workers.

120. A workplace representative represents the members of his trade union at the place of work, but the trade union of which he is an officer is responsible for his actions. Accordingly, trade unions shall clearly define the powers and duties of workplace representatives, and the circumstances and manner in which they can be removed from office.
121. Trade unions and management shall seek agreement on –
- (a) the number of workplace representatives needed in the workplace; and
 - (b) the work groups for which each representative is responsible.
122. Management shall make available facilities to the trade unions to conduct elections at the workplace.
123. Trade unions shall notify management promptly in writing when officials are appointed and when changes are made.
124. Trade unions shall –
- (a) give each workplace representative written credentials setting out his powers and duties within the trade union, the work group he represents and his term of office; and
 - (b) seek agreement with management on the issue of joint written credentials setting out the relevant rights and obligations of such representatives.
125. Where more than one trade union is recognised but each trade union has only a small number of members, the trade unions shall seek to agree on the election of a common representative to represent all their members at the workplace.

126. Where there are a number of representatives of different trade unions which negotiate jointly, the trade unions shall seek to agree on the election of a common representative to co-ordinate their activities at the workplace.
127. In each of these cases, trade unions shall seek agreement with management on the co-ordinating functions of the representative concerned.
128. Management shall make available facilities appropriate to the circumstances, such as –
- (a) lists of new workers;
 - (b) accommodation for meetings with, the workers whom they represent, other representatives and officers;
 - (c) access to a telephone and the provision of notice boards; and
 - (d) the use of office facilities where the volume of the representative's work justifies it.
129. Each trade union shall ensure that its representatives are adequately informed about its policies, organisation and agreements to which it is a party. Management shall ensure that the representatives are adequately informed about its objectives and employment policies.

PART IX – GRIEVANCE AND DISPUTE PROCEDURESGENERAL

130. All workers have a right to seek redress for grievances relating to their employment. Each worker must be told how he can do so.

131. Management shall establish, with the trade unions of workers concerned, arrangements under which individual workers can raise grievances and have them settled fairly and promptly. There shall be a formal procedure, except in very small enterprises where there is close personal contact between the employer and his workers.
132. Where trade unions are recognised, management shall establish with them a procedure for settling collective disputes.
133. Individual grievances and collective disputes are often dealt with through the same procedure. Where there are separate procedures, they shall be linked so that an issue can, if necessary, pass from one to the other, since a grievance may develop into a dispute.

INDIVIDUAL GRIEVANCE PROCEDURE

134. The aim of the procedure shall be to settle the grievance fairly and as near as possible to the point of origin. It shall be simple and rapid in operation.
135. The procedure shall be in writing and provide that –
 - (a) the grievance shall normally be discussed first between the worker and his immediate superior;
 - (b) the worker shall be accompanied at the next stage of discussion with management by his workplace representative if he so wishes;
 - (c) there shall be a right of appeal.

COLLECTIVE DISPUTE PROCEDURES

136. Disputes are broadly of 2 kinds-
- (a) disputes of rights (i.e. as to legal rights), which relate to application of existing collective agreements or contracts of employment; and
 - (b) disputes of interests (i.e. economic disputes), which relate to claims by workers or proposals by management about terms and conditions of employment.
137. A procedure for settling collective disputes shall be in writing and shall –
- (a) state the level at which an issue shall first be raised;
 - (b) lay down time limits for each stage of the procedure, with provision for extension by agreement; and
 - (c) preclude a strike, lock-out, or other form of industrial action until all stages of the procedure have been completed and a failure to agree formally recorded.
138. The procedure shall have the following stages –
- (a) workplace representatives shall raise the issue in dispute with management at the level directly concerned;
 - (b) failing settlement, it shall be referred to a higher level within the establishment; and
 - (c) if still unsettled, it shall be referred to further agreed stages, for example, to a stage of an industry-wide procedure, or to a higher level within the establishment.

139. The procedure shall include agreement to make use of the conciliation service provided by the Commission, and of the arbitration service provided by the Tribunal, and to take claims to the Court, as appropriate, before considering resort to any industrial action.

PART X- DISCIPLINARY PROCEDURES

140. Management shall ensure that fair and effective arrangements exist for dealing with disciplinary matters. These shall be agreed upon with the trade unions concerned and shall provide for full and speedy consideration by management of all the relevant facts. There shall be a formal procedure, except in very small establishments where there is close personal contact between the employer and his workers.
141. Management shall make known to every worker –
- (a) disciplinary rules and the agreed procedures; and
 - (b) the type of circumstances which can lead to suspension or dismissal.
142. Disciplinary rules shall not be perceived as a means of imposing sanctions or a dismissal procedure but rather aiming at encouraging workers to conform to acceptable and reasonable standards at the workplace.
143. Management shall apply progressive discipline on the understanding that discipline shall be corrective rather than coercive.
144. In defining the rules and procedures, management shall consult and seek the agreement of the workers' representatives or the recognised trade unions, where workers are unionised.

145. The rules shall be set out clearly and concisely in writing and shall be communicated to all workers.
146. The rules shall make a distinction between minor and serious cases of misconduct.
147. When a disciplinary matter arises, the relevant supervisor or manager shall first establish the facts and, where appropriate, obtain statements from the witnesses before deciding to drop the matter, arrange for informal counselling or initiate formal disciplinary proceedings.
148. Minor cases of misconduct and cases of sub-standard performance shall be dealt with by informal advice and counselling with the objective to help the workers to improve.
149. Formal hearing shall be held in cases of alleged misconduct.
150. Where a formal hearing is held, the person presiding over the hearing shall be a person who is able to make an independent decision and shall not have been involved in the investigation of the case.
151. The person presiding over the hearing shall consider among other factors whether –
- (a) the worker broke a rule of conduct;
 - (b) the rule was valid or reasonable;
 - (c) the worker knew the rule or shall have known about the rule; and
 - (d) the employer had been consistent in applying the rule.

152. In any case, incidents related to gross misconduct shall be subject to investigation and or disciplinary proceedings before a decision is taken.
153. Gross misconduct may include theft, fraud and deliberate falsification of records, physical violence, serious bullying and harassment, deliberate damage to property, serious insubordination, misuse of the enterprise's property or name, bringing the employer into serious disrepute, serious incapacity due to alcohol or illegal drug abuse, serious negligence which may cause unacceptable loss, damage, or injury; serious infringement of health and safety rules, serious breach of confidence.
154. The disciplinary procedures shall, without distinction or discrimination of any kind as to occupation, age, marital status, sex, sexual orientation, colour, race, religion, HIV status, national extraction, social origin, political opinion or affiliation –
- (a) specify the level of management which has the authority to take disciplinary actions;
 - (b) provide for the worker to be informed of the charges levelled against him;
 - (c) give the worker an opportunity to state his case;
 - (d) give the worker the right to be accompanied in a hearing by his trade union representative or an officer of the Ministry responsible for labour relations or his legal adviser;
 - (e) provide for proceedings, witness statements and records to be kept confidential;

- (f) provide for the matters to be dealt with without undue delay;
 - (g) indicate the disciplinary actions which may be taken ;
 - (h) ensure that disciplinary actions are not taken until the case has been fully investigated into;
 - (i) ensure that workers are given an explanation for any sanction taken;
 - (j) provide procedures for right of appeal and for the appeal to be heard by a senior manager not involved in the initial disciplinary proceedings;
 - (k) set a time limit not exceeding one fortnight for appeal to be lodged;
 - (l) provide for independent arbitration where the parties so wish.
155. Where an appeal is given, the worker shall be informed of the results of the appeal in writing and if the decision constitutes the final stage of the appeal procedure, the worker shall be informed accordingly.
156. Where the worker objects, on reasonable grounds, to the disciplinary proceedings being presided over by the person designated to do so, it may be appropriate to bring another person to chair the meeting.
157. Management may have recourse to an oral warning in case of minor infringement, where the worker fails to meet the required standards in spite of counselling. Where the worker receives a warning, he shall be informed of the reason for it and of his right of appeal. The warning shall be disregarded after three months if the worker improves his conduct or his performance.

158. Management may have recourse to a written warning for more serious infringement. The worker shall be informed of the reason for the warning and notified that a final warning would be given if there is no improvement after 6 months. He shall be informed of his right of appeal. The warning shall be disregarded after 6 months if the worker improves his conduct or performance.
 159. Management may have recourse to a final written warning where there has been no improvement despite previous warnings or where the infringement is sufficiently serious that management has no alternative than to issue a final warning. The worker shall be informed of the reason for the warning and of his right of appeal and of the possibility that failure on his part to improve his conduct or performance may lead to his dismissal. The warning shall be disregarded after 12 months if the worker has improved his conduct or his performance.
 160. Any suspension without pay shall be limited to a period of not more than 4 days.
 161. As a last resort, management may consider dismissal where the worker still fails to improve his conduct or performance or where there is a case of gross misconduct.
 162. No disciplinary action shall be contemplated against an officer until the case is discussed with a senior officer.
