Resource mobilisation highlights

- Global needs for Official Development Assistance (ODA) has increased significantly, including for sustainable development purposes. While total aid increased by 13.6% in 2022, this increase was primarily due to a sharp rise in spending on processing and hosting refugees within donor countries as well as assistance to Ukraine.
- The European Commission, the United States and the United Nations were the three largest contributors to the ILO in 2022
- In 2022, Contributions from multi-bilateral partners increased by more than US$ 65 million compared to the amounts observed in the previous two years.
- Working to end child labour and forced labour, skills promotion and employment intensive investment were among the most funded areas of work in 2022

ILO development cooperation priorities

- Entry points to ILO's development cooperation include priority action programmes – (1) transitions from the informal to the formal economy; (2) just transitions towards environmentally sustainable economies and societies; (3) decent work in supply chains; and (4) decent work in crisis and post-crisis situations – as well as the Global Accelerator on Jobs and Social Protection for Just Transitions.
- These could be leveraged to build an expanded role for development cooperation, which will be essential for realizing the Global Coalition for Social Justice.
