WHAT IS SKILLS MISMATCH?

Skills mismatch can take different forms. It can refer to the problems faced by employers to fill vacancies (skills shortages), where employees lack the skills necessary to do their jobs effectively (skill gaps); and when individuals have qualifications above or beyond those required for their job (over/under qualified). It also covers the concept of skills obsolescence where workers lose skills over time due to lack of use.

THE ILO IS LOOKING FOR IDEAS THAT SUPPORT

- ▶ Improved demand signalling (i.e. communication between government, employers, workers, educators, and other stakeholders to signal what skills are needed in the workforce).
- ▶ The development of soft and hard skills that meet market demands.
- ▶ The efforts of enterprises to link the skills development of their employees with business strategies.
- ▶ Improved access to training of under-represented groups including young people, women, people with disabilities, migrants and refugees.
- ▶ Multi-stakeholder collaboration and cost-sharing of skills initiatives.
- ▶ The delivery of work-based learning.
- ▶ The involvement or increased engagement of businesses in training development.
- ▶ Professional development of teachers, trainers and instructors through technical training or workplace exposure.
- ▶ Developing or accessing resources that help workers attain quality education/skills training opportunities.
