With over 50 per cent of the estimated 214 million international migrants in 2010 being economically active, the world of work needs to be adequately reflected in and mainstreamed into debates on international development. The UN High Level Dialogue on International Migration and Development, and debates within the Global Forum on Migration and Development and the Post-2015 UN Development Agenda, present important opportunities for moving these issues forward.

This event will explore innovative approaches to labour migration and development along three broad themes: 1) changing public perceptions of migrants and increasing protection of migrant workers' rights; 2) social dialogue and international migration governance; 3) and facilitating sustainable and inclusive development in the context of international and regional labour mobility.
